House Group Scores Army Courts Martial

SOLONS DEMAND 'INJUSTICES' BE CORRECTED

Report Discloses 142 Men Executed; 33,741 Said Sent To Prison

WASHINGTON, April 20—A house military affairs subcommittee, recommending a drastic program to correct "injustices" in courts martial proceedings, disclosed today that 142 Army men have been executed for rape, murder and desertion since Pearl Harbor.

An additional 33,741 have been imprisoned for lesser crimes, including two who were sentenced to life for going AWOL, the subcommittee said.

The subcommittee's 25,000-word report, based on six months of secret investigations, bristled with charges that the Army too often uses the system to "enforce discipline" instead of providing impartial justice for the accused.

"Some of the most striking miscarriages of justice," it charged, "have taken place abroad" where the Army hoped to impress the local populations.

"There have been many excessive sentences. The most tragic, of course, are the death sentences not commuted and about which it is so difficult to obtain information." Competent observers, the committee said, agree that in general Army courts "err on the side of severity."

"Most professional officers regard the system as a means of enforcing discipline," it said, and investigating officers, trial judge advocates and defense counsel possibly "feel the heavy hand of their commanding officers upon them."

To correct such injustices the committee proposed:

1. Establishment of an independent, private tribunal with power to alter or void any decisions returned by the military tribunals.
2. A complete and autonomous judicial department within the

FAIR AND MILD WEATHER DUE EASTER SUNDAY

By United Press
Sunny skies and mild temperatures for the nation Easter Sunday, were promised by the weatherman today.

Fair and mild from coast to coast was the nationwide forecast, he said.

There may be a few scattered light showers over the upper Mississippi river valley and the lower Great Lakes area and some thundershowers in the Rockies.

Elsewhere there will be sunshine and balmy breezes, according to the U. S. weather bureau forecast.

Even where rain is predicted, the weatherman said it will not be enough to spoil that new Easter bonnet. Skies will clear quickly and temperatures will remain unusually mild for this time of year, he said.

Easter Buying Spree May Break All Records

CHICAGO, April 20—Shoppers, flush with ready cash, crowded stores in a buying spree which sent sales reports up more than 40 per cent over last Easter, a survey of the nation's retail stores revealed today.

Managers of department stores in many cities, particularly in the eastern portion of the country reported that huge crowds were depleting stocks of frills and finery and even household appliances.

Women's apparel was the most sought after item, according to reports, women were buying "salad bowl" hats, lacy blouses and expensive lingerie. Men's suits, more plentiful than they were a few months ago, also were selling rapidly.

From New York to San Francisco, retailers said that business is "terrific." Many believed that sales might break all records.

Dun & Bradstreet reported that sales in eastern cities showed the highest rise over last year's Easter sales, with a rise of from 50 to 54 per cent.

In the Midwest sales were up 42 to 45 per cent, in the Southwest 28 to 42 per cent, Northwest 27 to 30, Pacific Coast 37 to 41, and South 29 to 33.

Shoppers who often were unable to purchase the finery they desired moved over into the household appliance departments where such items as washing machines and refrigerators, which in prewar years did not sell well during the Easter season, were in great demand.

SOLON WANTS REVISED PLAN

Senate May Deal Rougher With OPA Than House Without Changes

WASHINGTON, April 20—Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D., La. suggested today that the administration fix a new wage-price stabilization line.

Unless this is done, he said, President Truman and his economic aids stand little chance of getting the senate to patch up the wounds which the house inflicted on the OPA extension bill.

The doctored senator said he personally would work for continuance of price control "without too many amendments" but felt compelled to raise a warning voice.

He said it was "not fair" for the government to permit a bulge in the stabilization line to make room for wage increases and then keep a tight thumb on industry.

"There should be an entirely new stabilization line in the light of higher wages," he said. "And while it's about it, the administration should remove price ceilings on strawberries and shrimp, certain types of wearing apparel and other commodities less essential in the living costs of low and middle income families."

"Unless the President and Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles are willing to work along these lines," he said, they're going to have a hard time getting a better bill out of the senate than they got from the house."

WYATT LEARNS LAND INFLATION REALLY SERIOUS

Housing Expediter Reports Price Increases Are Far Worse Than Expected

WASHINGTON, April 20—Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt reported today that inflation in real estate is "far worse than anticipated," with homes that sold for $6,000 or less in 1940 up an average of 65.1 per cent.

The increases have been sharp since V-J day, Wyatt said. Prices on low cost homes—which were affected the most—have jumped 17.7 per cent since September. Homes built for war workers have jumped 30.5 per cent since their ceiling was lifted last fall.

A survey by Wyatt's national housing agency showed the Pacific coast states hardest hit. Homes in the under-$6,000 class here have risen 96.3 per cent since 1940.

Inflation hit every section, Wyatt's report showed, but the Northeastern states—from Maine to Wisconsin—suffered slightly less than the national average.

Since V-J day, medium priced homes—$6,000 to $12,000—climbed 14.8 per cent; raw land, 23 per cent; building lots, 23.3 per cent.

Increases since 1940—topped by the 65.1 per cent rise in low cost homes—reached 57 per cent on medium priced homes, 60.1 per cent on raw land, and 60.1 per cent on building lots.

In every region of the country, Wyatt's representatives found communities which had experienced price jumps of 100 per cent or more.

In the East North Central region, which includes Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, Wyatt's report showed these percentage increases: homes less than $6,000, 52.2; homes $6,000 to $12,000, 49.9; raw land, 36.9; building lots, 44.2.

10,000 PILGRIMS WATCH COMING OF HOLY FIRE

JERUSALEM, April 20—More than 10,000 pilgrims—many of them Copts from Egypt, black-robed women and white-turbaned men—today watched the coming of the holy fire, the most famous of Easter ceremonies in the Oriental churches.

Hours before the Greek patriarch arrived with the Armenian bishop in the square before the church of the Holy Sepulchre thousands were crowding the area.

A few moments later the place was in tumult as flaming torches appeared through the portholes on either side of the edifice and were snatched by the waiting runners. Candles were raised and with astonishing rapidity the whole place was ablaze with candle light. The lights were passed from one to another and in deafening noise the men and women waved bundles of burning candles in the air.

SENATE LEARNS ANY NATION MAY GET ATOM BOMB

WASHINGTON, April 20—The senate was informed today that any modern industrial nation will be able to produce atomic bombs within the next five years to 15 years.

A voluminous report from the atomic energy committee declared that atomic secrets are mostly written in "the book of nature. . . open to careful, painstaking readers the world over."

Industrial potential, not a magic hocus-pocus process, will determine just how soon other countries are producing the bomb in quantity, the report said.

Any relatively industrialized nation probably can produce the weapon in quantity within five to 15 years, members learned during a five month study of atomic problems.

Manufacturers Face Charges Seriousness Replaces College 'Rah Rah' Spirit

CPA Officials Claim 108 Clothing Makers Broke Style Restrictions

WASHINGTON, April 20—The civilian production administration charged today that 108 clothing manufacturers have been violating CPA style restrictions.

The CPA also reported that 27 out of 28 stores investigated were selling garments made in violation of CPA orders intended to conserve textiles.

A nation-wide survey made early this month disclosed 82 manufacturers were making "shorter coats"—shorter than 33 inches—in violation of a CPA order. CPA subsequently lifted the ban on these coats so that thousands of women would not be prevented from buying a new coat for the Easter parade.

Other widespread violations included suit jackets longer than 25 inches, coats and suit jackets with more than two pockets, coats with excessive sweep, and two or more garments sold at one unit price.

Some of the nation's best-known manufacturers were on the list of violators.

Even while the widespread violations were going on, representatives of almost all branches of the clothing manufacturing industry had been recommending that the style restrictions be continued. Only manufacturers of women's house dresses have objected to the regulations, CPA said.

The widespread violations caused some CPA compliance division officials to question whether it was worthwhile to try to enforce the rules.

"It would appear that there are no restrictions that would result in an appreciable saving of material, and, therefore, none which should be the subject of another nation-wide investigation for the purpose of obtaining compliance," said the OPA official who conducted the survey.

He pointed out that there is no restriction on foreign-made garments, that the restriction regarding suit jackets longer than 25 inches is so widely violated that "the restriction is ineffective," and that there is no control over the manufacture of double-breasted coats though there is a restriction as to double-breasted suit jackets.

The office of price administration is on record as favoring continuance of the order, however, as a method of controlling prices.

PAULEY PLANS ANOTHER TRY AT KOREAN STUDY

WASHINGTON, April 20—Representations commissioner Edwin W. Pauley will leave about May 1 for Manchuria and, he hopes, northern Korea, to see what is left of Japanese industry there.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes announced late yesterday that Pauley would go to the Far East to complete a survey that he began last winter but never finished because Russian army commanders refused to let him enter Manchuria and northern Korea.

COLUMBUS, O., April 20—A new seriousness and intensity of purpose has largely replaced the old "rah rah" spirit on America's campuses, Dr. Bland L. Stradley, vice-president of Ohio State University said today.

Dr. Stradley credited the student veteran with setting the pace for the undergraduates' new approach to their scholastic work.

He pointed out that of Ohio State's record-breaking 16,113 enrollment, 6,500 were in school under veterans' benefits, and another 1,000 veterans were there without claiming their veterans' privileges.

Scholastic records compiled at the university recently showed the veteran outscored his non-veteran classmate by a narrow margin, Dr. Stradley said.

"I don't see the 'rah rah' attitude that used to be so prevalent," he said. "These students are on the job. That pleases me because there is a lot of money involved and time is very important."

He attributed the changed attitude to the seriousness of the aftermath of the war and unsettled war conditions that made students conscious of their responsibilities.

Dr. Stradley did not wholly condemn the gayer approach to higher learning of the old days.

"College spirit, if orderly, is a good thing. We still have it here. Students are still interested in their athletics and other activities. But the days I can remember when a freshman was almost afraid to come to college because of the hazing are gone," he said.

"These veterans have definite ideas about classroom procedure, and aren't afraid to tell you about it."

ALASKA STRIKE ENDS AS PRICES OF FOOD SOAR

KETCHIKAN, Alaska, April 20—The longshoremen's strike which has blocked Alaskan ports for 18 days causing serious food shortages ended early today with an agreement between strikers and Alaskan shipping firms.

The agreement, terms of which were not immediately disclosed, came after a long night session called by Territorial Gov. Ernest Gruening.

Officials said workers would begin unloading ships today.

The strike, called by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union to insure inclusion of Alaskan dockworkers in any west coast wage agreement, had sent prices of fresh foods skyrocketing to heights reminiscent of gold rush days.

Tomatoes and cucumbers were selling for $1.10 each in a few stores that had any for sale. Lettuce was 75 cents a pound. Butter and meat stocks were exhausted.

COMMUNISTS IN CONTROL

CHUNGKING, April 20—Communist troops today consolidated their grip on the Manchurian capital of Changchun, first major Communist conquest of the Chinese civil war, while Gen. George C. Marshall tried to bring about an armistice.

LESS BREAD TO BE USED UNDER NEW PROGRAM

25 Per Cent Reduction In Supply Ordered; Wheat Bonus To Be Paid

PRICE INCREASE SEEN

Bakers Want More For Bread; Truman, Hoover Urge Aid To Starving

WASHINGTON, April 20—The government decrees that Americans must eat at least 25 per cent less bread and other wheat products for a while so this country can be sure of meeting its food pledges to hungry peoples of the world.

Coupled with this sweeping order was an offer of a 30-cent-a-bushel bonus to farmers who will make precious wheat and corn available for immediate shipment overseas. This was designed to draw out large grain stocks now stored on farms.

These dramatic actions emphasized the administration's deepening concern with the spectre of global starvation, a concern underscored by President Truman when he told an international radio audience last night that America could not turn its back on the world's misery.

The government was shifting from a completely voluntary program of food conservation to a more hard-fisted plan to control the flow of food to the retail market at the processor's level.

The new plan will permit millers to process only 75 per cent of the amount of wheat milled during the corresponding period of 1945. Any flour in excess of that quota must be sold to the government for export.

The order is effective Monday and will continue in force until June 30 unless extended.

As a result of the orders, bakers planned to ask the OPA for a retail price increase of one cent per pound on bread.

Mr. Truman asked the people to step up their voluntary efforts to conserve food. He suggested that Americans go on a European "starvation diet" two days a week to avert "the greatest threat of mass starvation in the history of mankind."

Must Share Food

"We would not be Americans," Mr. Truman said, "if we did not wish to share our comparative plenty with suffering people. I am sure I speak for every American when I say the United States is determined to do everything in its power to relieve the famine of half the world."

His solemn warning was supported by former president Herbert Hoover who spoke from Cairo. He said his tour of famine areas had convinced him that upwards of 150,000,000 Europeans plus countless millions in the Orient faced starvation.

Mr. Hoover soberly emphasized that America must bear 44 per cent of the world's relief burden. And he said the job could not be done at all without harsh sacrifices in all lands.

The cutback was expected to have about 250,000 bushels of

CONTRACT FOR RESURFACING OF STREETS READY

Contract with the state highway department covering the resurfacing of sections of North Court and East Main streets is scheduled to be signed at a special meeting of the city council called for 8 p. m. Saturday.

The improvements have been under discussion for several months and the Highway Department has agreed to proceed with the resurfacing job. The improvements are to be in North Court street from Pleasant street to the corporation line, and in East Main street from Mingo street to the railroad right-of-way.

The cost of the resurfacing is to be paid mostly by the state, although definite figures as to the total cost of the improvements and the share to be borne by the city were not available, according to City Solicitor George Gerhardt.

LESS BREAD TO BE USED UNDER NEW PROGRAM

25 Per Cent Reduction In Supply Ordered; Wheat Bonus To Be Paid

wheat by June 30 when the harvest gets under way. It means that Americans will eat less wheat cereals, pastries, macaroni, spaghetti and crackers as well as bread.

It also may hit their pocket-book. Bakers were set to demand an immediate price increase to offset their reduced production. They hoped to meet with OPA within a few days.

They claimed the order would mean at least a 35 per cent cut in domestic wheat consumption. They pointed out that the order was based on last year's millings whereas Americans now are eating much more wheat as a result of the return of millions of servicemen.

Bread To Be Scarce
Housewives generally seemed willing to support the new program although it might mean bare bread counters for late shoppers. Congressional reaction was slow in forming. Sen. William Langer, R., N. D., said the grain bonus was a step in the right direction but still would leave wheat prices 40 cents a bushel below World War I levels when the farmers got $2.26.

An OPA spokesman said the wheat and corn price bonus had the "wholehearted approval" of the price-fixing agency. He said a precedent for the action had been set during the war when the army sometimes was permitted to pay more for scarce materials.

The agriculture department said about 204,000,000 bushels of wheat were in farm bins April 1. If the 30-cent bonus is high enough it will mean that all but about 30,000,000 bushels of this wheat will be in the hands of the government by May 25. Farmers usually carry over that much.

Both the flour and grain programs were part of a six-point plan announced by Secretary of Agriculture Clayton P. Anderson to help meet the famine emergency. Cut Wheat Inventory

The plan also limited millers and food manufacturers to trim their wheat inventory to a 21-day supply by May 1. After that date any miller or manufacturer with more than that amount of wheat must turn it over to the government for export.

In addition, the government offered to buy an unlimited amount of oatmeal and whole oats for food relief.

This government's action probably will be followed shortly by a British decision to release half of its 1,000,000-ton wheat reserve for famine relief immediately with the understanding that it will be replaced later by the U. S. and Canada.

SPANIARDS FEAR LABOR BOYCOTT AGAINST SHIPS

MADRID, April 20—Well informed Spanish sources said today they feared that opposition to the Franco regime may lead to an international labor boycott against Spanish ships in world ports.

A boycott against loading and unloading Spanish ships would be a serious blow to Spain, informants said, because of the country's strained economic situation and food shortage. Such action would cut sharply Spanish imports and exports.

The same well informed quarters expressed fear that opposition to General Francisco Franco inside Spain—and outside, too—may be intensified greatly if the Polish proposal for diplomatic action against Spain is defeated by the UN security council.

COURT AND HIGH FIRE ALARM BOX IS REPLACED

Rebuilt fire alarm box was installed Saturday at North Court and High streets by firemen.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise said that other alarm boxes are badly in need of complete overhauling in the interest of public safety and to insure adequate protection against property loss by fire. Circleville's fire alarm system was installed in 1892, Chief Wise said.

Mrs. George D. McDowell expects to leave Monday for a short visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Finch at Carmel, Illinois.

PLAN TO STUDY SPAIN PROBLEM MAY BE CHANGED

NEW YORK, April 20—The Australian proposal for a United Nations investigation of the Franco regime in Spain faced the likelihood today of alterations designed to give it broader scope.

Reaction to the Australian plan, which would have the effect of temporarily shelving Poland's formal demand for severance of diplomatic relations with Spain by the United Nations, was growing increasingly favorable. It had a good chance of adoption when the council considers it next week.

But members of the United States delegation to the council are studying the investigation proposal with a view to suggesting possible changes or even a substitute plan to broaden the scope of the proposed inquiry.

British experts also were studying the surprise plan offered by Col. W. H. Hodgson, Australia's outspoken council representative. Hodgson's proposal would set up a five-nation subcommittee to investigate the Spanish situation and report its findings to the security council by May 17.

REECE ATTACKS PAC, DEMOCRATS IN FIRST TALK

WASHINGTON, April 20—Chairman Carroll Reece of the Republican national committee said last night that the GOP is the true liberal party of America.

He told a radio audience that the Democratic administration causes "a sense of national humiliation" because it "is unable to translate any important part of its legislative program into actuality."

Reece attacked the CIO political action committee as "the spearhead of red reactionism in the United States," and complained it was "raising a campaign slush fund of $6,000,000 to be used to defeat members of congress who refuse to do their bidding."

"Existing law limits expenditures by the national committee of any political party to $3,000,000 in any one year," he said. "Apparently, however, under the law as enforced by the present administration, there is no limit upon the expenditures which may be made by the PAC."

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR WILL ATTEND CALVARY SERVICE

FOOD HEAD MAY QUIT
LONDON, April 20—The critical European food shortage may cause the resignation of Sir Ben Smith, British food minister, in the first shakeup of the labor government, the London Daily Mirror predicted today.

3. Appointment by the President, with consent of the senate, of a judge advocate general and his assistants who will serve in a civilian capacity.

4. Permitting defense counsel to secure witnesses "on an equal basis with the prosecution."

5. An end to closed door sessions with all proceedings open to the public.

6. A requirement that, at the request of an accused enlisted man, the court shall consist of one-third enlisted men chosen from some unit other than that commanded by the officer who brought the charge.

7. Punishment to apply to officers and enlisted men equally.

8. A penalty for rape no more severe than the maximum imposed by the civil law of the country in which the offense was committed.

Rep. Carl T. Durham, D., N. C., chairman of the subcommittee, disclosed that it began its investigation quietly six months ago following widespread complaints against both army and navy courts martial proceedings.

The senate judiciary committee has approved a resolution for a similar inquiry but has not yet obtained the money necessary to conduct it.

The army, too, is investigating. The senate group, however, has made it clear that it will not be satisfied by any army investigation into its own alleged shortcomings.

HOOVER LISTS 6-POINT WORLD FOOD PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, April 20—Here is the six-point world food program laid down by former president Herbert Hoover to meet the threat of mass starvation in Europe and Asia:

1. A U. S. grain-buying program to guarantee export of 1,000,000 tons of cereals a month through July, backed up by rigid public conservation of bread and fats.

2. A limit of 300 grams daily on Europe's per capita bread consumption. This would be about 50 per cent more than Americans would get but bread is Europe's link with life.

3. Release by Britain of half of her 1,000,000-ton wheat reserve for immediate relief feeding.

4. A 40 per cent cut in Latin American wheat and flour imports from the U. S., Canada and Argentina during the next four months.

5. An increase to 300,000 tons a month in Russia's grain contribution to the world relief pool by Aug. 1.

6. Relief priorities for smaller liberated nations whose resources are most limited and whose people comprise about 15 per cent of Europe's needy population.

JUDGE RULES OUT COCKROACH AS ULCER CAUSE

SACRAMENTO, April 20—The food value of a cockroach may be doubtful, but you can't get ulcers from eating one. That's the ruling of Federal Judge Martin I. Welsh.

The decision was handed down by Judge Welsh in the suit of Charles L. Cadle, of Sonoma, Calif., against the war shipping administration.

Cadle sought $25,000 from the WSA on grounds he got ulcers from eating cockroaches in his oatmeal, weevils in his rice and aphids in his broccoli while shipping in the Indian ocean with the merchant marine in 1943.

The assertion that the cockroaches—"at all"—caused Cadle's ulcers is "nothing more than speculative and conjectural," said the judge.

VETERAN WANTS PROPERTY BACK

Suit Filed Against Relatives Seeking Reconveyance Of Darbyville Land

Claiming that he has been deprived of his real estate by "fraud and conspiracy", Samuel C. Morgan, Darbyville, an overseas war veteran, filed suit Saturday in Pickaway county common pleas court against his parents, his sister, and his brother-in-law. The defendants are Mrs. Viola Morgan, her husband, John Morgan, Mrs. Elizabeth Draise, and her husband, Donald W. Draise, all of Darbyville.

Declaring that he transferred a piece of Darbyville real estate to his mother May 25, 1939, without consideration, to provide her with a home and security under a specific agreement that she would reconvey the property for him whenever he so requested, and reciting that he was inducted into the Army March 17, 1941 and was honorably discharged Sept. 29, 1945, Morgan alleges that soon after his return to Darbyville in October, 1945, he repeatedly asked his mother to transfer the piece of real estate back to his name but that she refused.

Subsequently, Morgan claims, his mother entered into a "conspiracy" with her husband and daughter and that as a result she executed a deed to the property April 4, 1946 to Mrs. Draise, the daughter, "for the purpose of defrauding this plaintiff."

In a second cause of action Morgan asks that the court cause to be transferred to him a second parcel of Darbyville real estate which he says was purchased by his mother with cash sent to her in the form of Army allotments and that said allotments were intended solely for his mother's support and for no other purpose.

Morgan's suit is for specific performance of contract, reconveyance of real estate, conveyance of real estate, and an accounting of rents and profits.

John Deere Sights Were Set High

In Designing New Farm Equipment

ALL during the war, the experimental departments in John Deere factories continued, without interruption, their development of new and improved machines.

Sights were set high . . . designers aimed at new and practical ways of making farm life easier, more profitable. And shortly, the farmers of America will see a parade of great equipment that will prove their aim was true . . . equipment matched to the 109-year-old John Deere tradition of quality manufacture—more value for the dollar invested.

Revolutionary is the new hydraulic power-control on John Deere tractors. A touch of the hand actuates a rock-shaft for integral equipment or a cylinder on drawn and power-driven machines—lifting, lowering, and maintaining them in any desired working position. It truly introduces the lever-less age in implement design.

Outstanding are new one-man Quik-Tatch devices for cultivators, bedders, plows, and other integral equipment . . . time-savers that mean more hours in the field, less knuckle-scraping in the change

TRAGIC DELAY

It is a rather common procedure to "take the will for the deed." People read in the newspapers about some necessary thing to be done for human welfare and say to themselves: "Yes, of course, this must be done." Then they forget about it, under the pressure of daily life and work, or assume that it has been done.

But some do not forget. Among them is Leland B. Henry, executive director of the Commission of Christian Social Relations of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, who reminds the American public of such facts as these:

Large areas of European farm land will go untillied this year because men are too weak from hunger to till them.

The President at Washington has shown that this nation is 12,000,000 bushels short of fulfilling its export commitments for the first quarter of 1946.

One "wheatless day" per week, urged so generally that many people seem to think it has already been done, is not yet established, though its establishment would be fairly simple.

Apparently many well-meaning people are telling what to do, but few or none are setting up the practical machinery to do it. Thus many starve in Europe, and millions "exist on a level of bare existence." Surely, in so rich and generous a nation as ours, this is unnecessary.

EASTER is more than a ceremony, more than a festival. It is a time when Nature awakes, when all things are made new, when human beings suddenly arise and look up and around them, and suddenly realize after the long winter and slow spring that "God's in his heaven" and by that same token "all's right with the world."

That is, when men are sensitive and wise enough to yield to the spirit of Easter, which makes all things new, even as Nature does in her thousand ways. It is a time when God and Man and Nature seem to cooperate to make the best of possible worlds. Resting for a moment from trouble, toil and confusion people gain strength by entering into the spirit of new life and happiness.

FUTURE ATOM BOMBING

IF atomic research for Nazi purposes is now being secretly conducted in Spain, where the desired materials are said to exist, it is a natural development. We Americans and our allies could not monopolize our terrific atomic bomb indefinitely. The possibilities, however, on both sides of past and present war alignments, are terrible to contemplate.

If it is possible to round up such deadly war materials by world agreement, and restrict their purposes and operations before the next wave of atomic warfare strikes this so-called civilization, now is the time for it.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 20—The world statesmen were so polite in their Iran debate, the pure facts of the matter escaped popular attention. The newspapers published what went on, and when none of the parties to the debate went into the actual, provable, apparent true character of the issue—the accounts reflected that void.

Iran simply had come under Russian domination and therefore wished to withdraw her complaints pleading for her independence from Russia.

The cumbersome obvious steps leading up to this absorption were these: the Communists started a revolution in northern Iran, kept out Iran's soldiers until revolutionists had annexed for her hegemony of "friendly states" the northern province. Then Moscow secured removal of a protesting Iranian premier, installed Ahmad Qavam a "friendly" man, subsequently summoned him to Moscow, announced an agreement with him which his government (not all "friendly" to Moscow) publicly denied: complaint was made to UN by the Iranian ambassador here; another "agreement" giving Russia oil concessions and all others demanded was announced from Moscow, but Iran said it had not been informed even of such negotiations until the Russian ambassador arrived with the list of concessions imposed by Moscow.

Finally the ambassador arrived, and Qavam gave every indication of having accepted them under duress; Russia announced the complaint to UN would be withdrawn and later the Iranian ambassador filed a notice that Qavam had come to have "every confidence" in the promise of Stalin to withdraw Red troops May 6—a withdrawal which Stalin had previously promised, in writing with us and the British, to make two months earlier.

This was the comedy of diplomatic pretense as acted out practically in the full public gaze in daily dispatches.

Yet UN avoided all these matters in the debate and concerned itself primarily with the Russian charge that the U. S. and British did not want world peace, were up to something unfair or diabolical. It was all very polite—and partly inane; certainly irrelevant.

We are living in an age in which we have been accustomed to insincerity, devoutly maintained by nations and men. But in this case of Iran, the world has witnessed the zenith of all pretense, the grim, unwitting comedy of the Russian position was indeed even more complete than the published facts, and can be seen in this following consideration:

Why would Russia so melodramatically press this question on April 15, when, in three weeks time, her troops are to come out anyway (she said) and she already had Qavam and the Iran government in camp? Why hurry the UN into washing its hands of the matter now? Why not wait three weeks and win anyway?

The big news would be the answer to this question and others from it. Is Russia trying to scuttle the effectiveness of UN with technical embarrassments? Is she facetious? Has her diplomacy become a farce? Is her technique becoming elephantine and less smart?

There are good international diplomatic sources of great authority which have an answer to these questions:

DIET AND HEALTH

The Puzzling Problem of Kidney Stone Formations

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ONE OF the most puzzling of still unsolved medical problems has to do with the formation of a certain type of kidney stones. Stones which form in the kidneys may be made up of various substances but, in the main, they are composed of one or the other of two mineral salts, phosphates or oxalates.

Now the why and wherefore of phosphate stone formation is pretty well understood and for this reason doctors have had no little success in preventing their recurrence. On the other hand causes of oxalate stone formation remain obscure.

Two Kinds of Stone

It is agreed, according to Drs. Harold Leitch and Rosemary Murphy of Boston, that infections and blocking of the flow of urine, so important in producing phosphate stones, have no effect in producing oxalate stones.

With these obvious causes out, doctors have tried to discover whether diet might perhaps play some role in the formation of this most common of all types of kidney stones.

They noted that oxalate stones are of much more frequent occurrence in the people of certain areas of the world than in those living elsewhere. From this it is suggested that the use of a diet high in oxalic acid content may result in stones of this kind.

Among such foods are: beet tops, Swiss chard, parsley, rhubarb, spinach, dried figs, cocoa, chocolate and gelatin. Black tea and ground pepper are also rich in oxalic acid.

Nothing Conclusive

However, there are other areas where such stones develop frequently in which the diet employed is low in oxalates, so there is nothing conclusive about this observation.

Again experiments were carried out in which oxalate stones were produced in rats on a diet low in magnesium. However, whether or not lessening of the magnesium content of the diet in human beings may be a factor in oxalate stone production is still not known.

Nevertheless, a diet has been suggested which it is thought may be helpful in preventing kidney stones made up of calcium oxalate. This is one made up of plenty of calcium, magnesium and phosphorus, but low in oxalate-rich foods.

It should contain also plenty of whole-grain foods, a variety of fruits and vegetables, excluding those mentioned above, milk, butter, meat and meat broth. If necessary, calcium and magnesium preparations may be used to supplement the diet. It is also suggested that increasing the intake of vitamins A and B-complex, and a lessening of the starches and sugars in the diet may also be of value.

Some things are certain, constipation should be eliminated and worry avoided as much as possible. From 8 to 10 glasses of water should be drunk daily.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. G.: What causes numbness in the hands?

Answer: This may be due to nerve disorders, trouble with circulation, vitamin deficiency, and similar causes. Careful study by a physician is needed in each instance to determine the cause before treatment can be prescribed.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

VALENTE produced a small batch of snapshots: his home in Rio—a romantic dream castle—and several family groups—consisting of his parents, a brother, and a sister with her husband. All handsome people, the men distinguished looking in the Latin manner, the two women lovely.

"My father and my brother have passed on since these were taken," Valente told me. "My father was old, so it was not too surprising. But in my brother's case it was sadly needless. He drowned, while he was out sailing with a friend."

Then he explained that he wasn't really needed in Rio as his brother-in-law was running the family business now. Besides, he had no intention of depriving Neal of her career.

"Of course I wish to take her to Rio for a while, to meet my people. But I am too proud of her success to spoil it, and am strongly thinking of backing her next vehicle."

"Even if it's the play Deane Kennedy is writing for her?" I asked. He gave his quick Latin shrug. "Why not—if the play is good and Neal wishes to do it?" And then he changed the subject to Dita. "Neal has spoken so much of her, I hope I shall meet her some day soon."

It was as good as asking for an invitation. And he got it. "Why not come out to Elmpoint with me then on Friday? I'm sure Dita and Dick will love to have you, and you can be back in town before Neal arrives." I suggested, more because the presence of Neal's ardent suitor and, perhaps, future husband would take Dita's mind off the murder, than to please Valente.

He accepted with alacrity. And then pulled a small box—a beautiful thing of gold and enamel, glittering with small diamonds—from his pocket, snapped it open and held it out to me.

"It's a Valente heirloom, and so is the box. Do you think Neal will like it for an engagement ring?" he asked hopefully.

"It was the largest and greenest emerald I have ever seen, in a lovely antique setting. And I hadn't the slightest doubt that Neal, with her passion for everything green, would like it. Enough to become engaged to almost anyone. But would she marry the giver, or try to keep the ring without binding herself?"

We parted a little later, after having become "Tonio" and "Jane" to each other, and I returned to the office in a distinctly lighter mood.

Talking of things other than murder and help, particularly if the other things were so intriguing and amusing as the prospect of Neal's marriage to Tonio. And I decided to impart the news to Dita at once.

Just as I'd foreseen, she was delighted.

"Is he terribly handsome and romantic?" she wanted to know.

"Handsomeness—yes, very. But romantic—not so's you'd notice it," I told her. "Fact is, he's a bit on the stuffy side. Solid citizen and all that. But, well—if Neal takes him, he must have his moments."

Dita giggled. "I get it. You mean, Neal wouldn't marry a pig in a poke. Well, be sure and bring him here so that I can judge for myself." Then she heaved a tremendous sigh and informed me, "Oh, Jane dear, I'm so glad! This is the first time you've made me believe you're honestly not ill with fright and worry."

I could do nothing but say: "But you're wrong. I never was scared or worried, pet," before she hung up with a soft laugh. But even if I felt a little guilty about not having been so unconvincing, her final acceptance of my noncombatant status was a relief, and I worked hard all afternoon as a consequence.

I even took an armful of script home with me, for the first time since Margot's death, and spent the evening in my room reading it while Claire, who wouldn't leave me alone in the apartment with Rosa, hung on the phone in her room, talking with her man-of-the-moment.

I went to bed early though, with the comforting thought that tomorrow, after the inquest was over, my life would return to normal, even if the police continued digging into poor Margot's past. And I woke rested and fresh on Thursday morning.

I thought I'd have time to go to the office and glance through the mail before the inquest—at 11:30—and I wondered why I wasn't more afraid of testifying in public, besides worrying a little about Deane, who was such a jittery fool it made him look guilty.

And then came Claire's familiar knock at the door. I called a cheery "Come in!" and turned around to wish her good morning, without stopping the work I was doing with my lipstick.

She had a letter in her hand and looked as if she had had a shock. Over her shoulder I could see Rosa's face in the hall, white and scared.

"Letter for you. From Polly Woodford. Must have written it in the lounge of the Century before it pulled out," she said in a strangely flat voice.

I took the letter. No doubt it was written from the famous train. The stationery proclaimed it loudly. "What in the world is he writing me for?" I thought out loud as I slit open the envelope. The note it contained was short, and full of exclamation points. It read:

My dear Mademoiselle Applebee: I am ashamed! After my rudeness to you! You are the most forgiving person in the world! Your thoughtful gift will shorten my journey most pleasantly! A thousand thanks!

Devotedly!
Paul Woodford.

I read the short missive aloud, and then glanced at Claire, utterly at a loss. "What does he mean, 'my thoughtful gift'?" I asked her. "I haven't given him anything."

"The police think you have," Claire told me soberly. "Come on, Inspector Barry is waiting for you."

In the living room I found Inspector Barry, Hunt, two plain clothesmen and the Mullins who had taken the morning after Margot Ingalls' murder, all staring at me so solemnly I felt guilty without knowing of what.

"Claire says you think I sent Polly Woodford something to the train. A gift of some kind. But I didn't. I don't know what this note is all about," I told the inspector unasked, offering him Polly's letter.

He took it without a word, read it and passed it on to Hunt, who repeated the procedure and handed it back.

"You are sure you didn't send Woodford's a jar of caviar?" the inspector asked tersely, putting the note in his pocket.

"Of course I'm sure. Why—what is it?" I stammered in growing alarm.

"Woodford has been murdered on the train," he told me grimly, "by poisoned caviar sent him as a bon voyage gift. And the letter that came with the caviar was signed with your name."

Polly murdered—poisoned by caviar! The thought was such a shock it hit me with the force of a physical blow. I heard myself say, "I never wrote him a line and I never sent him any caviar." Then I clapped my hand to my mouth and just managed to reach the bathroom before I was violently and wretchedly sick.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

CHANGES IN BIDDING

BRIDGE IS one game in which strategy and tactics are always undergoing change, and the war years made no exception. The last few seasons have brought almost universal acceptance of several procedures which have been found effective by high-ranking players.

Chief among these is the disappearance of the old "strong three bid." Instead of bidding three of a suit originally on a strong suit with perhaps an ace on the side, the best players will not do that any more because they have learned that it crowds their own side more often than it crowds the opposition, and frequently results in reaching a contract of the wrong height or in the wrong declaration. With such a hand they now bid one of the suit.

In fact, fine players are so unanimous on this that they class as a fifth-rate and unintelligent player anyone who can't see that the "strong three bid" is losing bridge.

The original suit bid of three is now reserved by fine players for those unusual hands so lacking in high card strength that they fear the opponents have a game. Their hand would be worthless at any declaration except that suit, but they could not be punished too badly if doubled by opponents who held all the high cards. Their purpose in making such a bid is, of course, pre-emptive, to shut the strong opponents out of the bidding entirely, if possible, or at least to crowd them into the wrong declaration.

Take these three hands, for instance:

1. ♠ A K Q 10 9 4
♥ A 6
♦ J 4
♣ 8 6 4

2. ♠ A 10 9 7 6 5 4 2
♦ K 5
♣ 6 4

3. ♠ Q J 9 7 6 5 3 2
♦ None
♣ J 10 9 6

Hand No. 1 is much too strong to justify crowding your own side with a bid of 3-Spades; your partner's response may have to be first in diamonds and later in clubs. If so, how will you then get down to 3-No Trumps, which may be the only game in the deal? It is a fine opening bid of 1-Spade. No. 2 is still much too strong in high cards for 3-Spades; better to pass and get into the bidding later, than crowd your side or tell your partner your hand has no value if he considers a late business double of the opponents. No. 3 is a perfect example of the unusual kind of hand on which the stars bid 3-Spades, if vulnerable, telling your partner, as well as opponents, your hand is worthless, that you are overbidding a couple of tricks, or possibly three, and that you are trying to impede the probably stronger opponents. If not vulnerable, it would justify 4-Spades, and with one less spade it would call for 3-Spades.

Such bids on weak enough hands, with a long enough suit, raise hell with strong opponents. In striving to compete against them, practically all fine players have changed their conventions, since now they will often desire to play a No Trump game contract after an opponent has made such a bid, whereas against the out-moded solid-suit three bid, a No Trump game was generally impossible.

The conventions widely used now against a weak three-bid by the best players—about which we first wrote approximately two years ago—are as follows: 3-No Trumps shows a desire to play at that contract; a double indicates the hope of beating the contract of three; a minimum bid of the next higher ranking suit, such as 3-Hearts over 3-Diamonds or 4-Clubs over 3-Spades, shows strength in the other suits and operates like an informatory or takeout double asking the partner to bid his suit length, and any other bid is in its natural meaning. Conventions following opening bids of four are unchanged.

Your Week-End Question

What are the two basic plans for the play of a suit contract, one or the other of which must usually be used to some extent, to the exclusion of the other, to obtain the best results?

vanage being, of course, the claims never talk back to their owners.

That is, when men are sensitive and wise enough to yield to the spirit of Easter, which makes all things new, even as Nature does in her thousand ways. It is a time when God and Man and Nature seem to cooperate to make the best of possible worlds. Resting for a moment from trouble, toil and confusion people gain strength by entering into the spirit of new life and happiness.

FUTURE ATOM BOMBING

IF atomic research for Nazi purposes is now being secretly conducted in Spain, where the desired materials are said to exist, it is a natural development. We Americans and our allies could not monopolize our terrific atomic bomb indefinitely. The possibilities, however, on both sides of past and present war alignments, are terrible to contemplate.

If it is possible to round up such deadly war materials by world agreement, and restrict their purposes and operations before the next wave of atomic warfare strikes this so-called civilization, now is the time for it.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 20 — The world statesmen were so polite in their Iran debate, the pure facts of the matter escaped popular attention. The newspapers published what went on, and when none of the parties to the debate went into the actual, provable, apparent true character of the issue—the accounts reflected that void.

Iran simply had come under Russian domination and therefore wished to withdraw her complaints pleading for her independence from Russia.

The cumbersome obvious steps leading up to this absorption were these: the Communists started a revolution in northern Iran, kept out Iran's soldiers until revolutionists had annexed for her hegemony of "friendly states" the northern province.

Then Moscow secured removal of a protesting Iranian premier, installed Ahmad Qavam a "friendly" man, subsequently summoned him to Moscow, announced an agreement with him which his government (not all "friendly" to Moscow) publicly denied: complaint was made to UN by the Iran ambassador here; another "agreement" giving Russia oil concessions and all others demanded was announced from Moscow, but Iran said it had not been informed even of such negotiations until the Russian ambassador arrived with the list of concessions imposed by Moscow.

Finally the ambassador arrived, and Qavam gave every indication of having accepted them under duress; Russia announced the complaint to UN would be withdrawn and later the Iran ambassador filed a notice that Qavam had come to have "every confidence" in the promise of Stalin to withdraw Red troops May 6—a withdrawal which Stalin had previously promised, in writing with us and the British, to make two months earlier.

This was the comedy of diplomatic pretense as acted out practically in the full public gaze in daily dispatches.

Yet UN avoided all these matters in the debate and concerned itself primarily with the Russian charge that the U. S. and British did not want world peace, were up to something unfair or diabolical. It was all very polite—and partly inane; certainly irrelevant.

We are living in an age in which we have been accustomed to insincerity, devoutly maintained by nations and men. But in this case of Iran, the world has witnessed the zenith of all pretense, the grim, unwitting comedy of the Russian position was indeed even more complete than the published facts, and can be seen in this following consideration:

Why would Russia so melodramatically press this question on April 15, when, in three weeks time, her troops are to come out anyway (she said) and she already had Qavam and the Iran government in camp? Why hurry the UN into washing its hands of the matter now? Why not wait three weeks and win anyway?

The big news would be the answer to this question and others from it. Is Russia trying to scuttle the effectiveness of UN with technical embarrassments? Is she facetious? Has her diplomacy become a farce? Is her technique becoming elephantine and less smart?

There are good international diplomatic sources of great authority which have an answer to these questions:

The Puzzling Problem of Kidney Stone Formations

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ONE of the most puzzling of still unsolved medical problems has to do with the formation of a certain type of kidney stones. Stones which form in the kidneys may be made up of various substances but, in the main, they are composed of one or the other of two mineral salts, phosphates or oxalates.

Now the why and wherefore of phosphate stone formation is pretty well understood and for this reason doctors have had no little success in preventing their recurrence. On the other hand causes of oxalate stone formation remain obscure.

Two Kinds of Stone

It is agreed, according to Drs. Harold Jephers and Rosemary Murphy of Boston, that infections and blocking of the flow of urine, so important in producing phosphate stones, have no effect in producing oxalate stones.

With these obvious causes out, doctors have tried to discover whether diet might perhaps play some role in the formation of this most common of all types of kidney stones.

They noted that oxalate stones are of much more frequent occurrence in the people of certain areas of the world than in those living elsewhere. From this it is suggested that the use of a diet high in oxalic acid content may result in stones of this kind.

Among such foods are: beet tops, Swiss chard, parsley, rhubarb, spinach, dried figs, cocoa, chocolate and gelatin. Black tea and ground pepper are also rich in oxalic acid.

Nothing Conclusive

However, there are other areas where such stones develop frequently in which the diet employed is low in oxalates, so there is nothing conclusive about this observation.

Again experiments were carried out in which oxalate stones were produced in rats on a diet low in magnesium. However, whether or not lessening of the magnesium content of the diet in human beings may be a factor in oxalate stone production is still not known.

Nevertheless, a diet has been suggested which it is thought may be helpful in preventing kidney stones made up of calcium oxalate. This is one made up of plenty of calcium, magnesium and phosphorus, but low in oxalate-rich foods.

It should contain also plenty of whole-grain foods, a variety of fruits and vegetables, excluding those mentioned above, milk, butter, meat and meat broth. If necessary, calcium and magnesium preparations may be used to supplement the diet. It is also suggested that increasing the intake of vitamins A and B-complex, and a lessening of the starches and sugars in the diet may also be of value.

Some things are certain, constipation should be eliminated and worry avoided as much as possible. From 8 to 10 glasses of water should be drunk daily.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. G.: What causes numbness in the hands?

Answer: This may be due to nerve disorders, trouble with circulation, vitamin deficiency, and similar causes. Careful study by a physician is needed in each instance to determine the cause before treatment can be prescribed.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX
VALENTE produced a small batch of snapshots: his home in Rio—a romantic dream castle—and several family groups—consisting of his parents, a brother, and a sister with her husband. All handsome people, the men distinguished looking in the Latin manner, the two women lovely.

"My father and my brother have passed on since these were taken," Valente told me. "My father was old, so it was not too surprising. But in my brother's case it was sadly needless. He drowned, while he was out sailing with a friend."

Then he explained that he wasn't really needed in Rio as his brother-in-law was running the family business now. Besides, he had no intention of depriving Neal of her career.

"Of course I wish to take her to Rio for a while, to meet my people. But I am too proud of her success to spoil it, and am strongly thinking of backing her next vehicle."

"Even if it's the play Deane Kennedy is writing for her?" I asked. He gave his quick, Latin shrug. "Why not—if the play is good and Neal wishes to do it?" And then he changed the subject to Dita. "Neal has spoken so much of her, I hope I shall meet her some day soon."

It was as good as asking for an invitation. And he got it. "Why not come out to Elmpoint with me then on Friday? I'm sure Dita and Dick will love to have you, and you can be back in town before Neal arrives," I suggested, more because of the presence of Neal's ardent suitor and, perhaps, future husband would take Dita's mind off the murder, than to please Valente.

He accepted with alacrity. And then pulled a small box—a beautiful thing of gold and enamel, glittering with small diamonds—from his pocket, snapped it open and held it out to me.

"It's a Valente heirloom, and so is the box. Do you think Neal will like it for an engagement ring?" he asked hopefully.

"It was the largest and greenest emerald I had ever seen, in a lovely antique setting. And I hadn't the slightest doubt that Neal, with her passion for everything green, would like it. Enough to become engaged to almost anyone. But would she marry the giver, or try to keep the ring without binding herself?"

We parted a little later, after having been "Tonio" and "Jane" to each other, and I returned to the office in a distinctly lighter mood. Talking of things other than murder and nesp, particularly if the other things were so intriguing and amusing as the prospect of Neal's marriage to Tonio. And I decided to impart the news to Dita at once. Just as I'd foreseen, she was delighted.

"Is he terribly handsome and romantic?" she wanted to know.

"Handsomeness—yes, very. But romantic—not so's you'd notice it," I told her. "Fact is, he's a bit on the stuffy side. Solid citizen and all that. But, well—if Neal takes him, he must have his moments."

Dita giggled. "I get it. You mean, Neal wouldn't marry a pig in a poke. Well, be sure and bring him here so that I can judge for myself." Then she heaved a tremendous sigh and informed me, "Oh, Jane dear, I'm so glad! This is the first time you've made me believe you're honestly not ill with fright and worry."

I could do nothing but say: "But you're wrong. I never was scared or worried, pet," before she hung up with a soft laugh. But even if I felt a little guilty about having been so unconvincing, her final acceptance of my noncombustant status was a relief, and I worked hard all afternoon as a consequence.

I even took an armful of script home with me, for the first time since Margot's death, and spent the evening in my room reading it while Claire, who wouldn't leave me alone in the apartment with Rosa, hung on the phone in here, talking with her man-of-the-moment.

I went to bed early though, with the comforting thought that tomorrow, after the inquest was over, my life would return to normal, even if the police continued digging into poor Margot's past. And I woke rested and fresh on Thursday morning.

I thought I'd have time to go to the office and glance through the mail before the inquest—at 11:30—and I wondered why I wasn't more afraid of testifying in public, besides worrying a little about Deane, who was such a jittery fool it made him look guilty.

And then came Claire's familiar knock at the door. I called a cheery "Come in!" and turned around to wish her good morning, without stopping the work I was doing with my lipstick.

She had a letter in her hand and looked as if she had had a shock. Over her shoulder I could see Rosa's face in the hall, white and scared.

"Letter for you. From Polly Woodford. Must have written it in the lounge of the Century before it pulled out," she said in a strangely flat voice.

I took the letter. No doubt it was written from the famous train. The stationery proclaimed it loudly. "What in the world is he writing me for?" I thought out loud as I slit open the envelope. The note it contained was short, and full of exclamation points. It read:

My dear Mademoiselle Applebee: I am ashamed! After my rudeness to you! You are the most forgiving person in the world! Your thoughtful gift will shorten my journey most pleasantly! A thousand thanks!

Devotedly!

Paul Woodford.

I read the short missive aloud, and then glanced at Claire, utterly at a loss. "What does he mean, 'my thoughtful gift'?" I asked her. "I haven't given him anything."

"The police think you have," Claire told me soberly. "Come on, Inspector Barry is waiting for you."

In the living room I found Inspector Barry, Hunt, two plain clothesmen and the Mullins who had taken notes the morning after Margot Ingalls' murder, all staring at me as solemnly, I felt guilty without knowing of what.

"Claire says you think I sent Polly Woodford something to the train. A gift of some kind. But I didn't. I don't know what this note is all about," I told the inspector unasked, offering him Polly's letter.

He took it without a word, read it and passed it on to Hunt, who repeated the procedure and handed it back.

"You are sure you didn't send Woodford a jar of caviar?" the inspector asked tersely, putting the note in his pocket.

"Of course I'm sure. Why—what is it?" I stammered in growing alarm.

"Woodford has been murdered on the train," he told me grimly, "by poisoned caviar sent him as a birthday gift. And the letter that came with the caviar was signed with your name."

Polly murdered—poisoned by caviar! The thought was such a shock it hit me with the force of a physical blow. I heard myself say, "I never wrote him a line and I never sent him any caviar." Then I clapped my hand to my mouth and just managed to reach the bathroom before I was violently and wretchedly sick.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

CHANGES IN BIDDING

BRIDGE is one game in which strategy and tactics are always undergoing change, and the war years made no exception. The last few seasons have brought almost universal acceptance of several procedures which have been found effective by high-ranking players.

Chief among these is the disappearance of the old "strong three bid." Instead of bidding three of a suit originally on a strong suit with perhaps an ace on the side, the best players will not do that any more because they have learned that it crowds their own side more often than it crowds the opposition, and frequently results in reaching a contract of the wrong height or in the wrong declaration. With such a hand they now bid one of the suit.

In fact, fine players are so unanimous on this that they class as a fifth-rate and unintelligent player anyone who can't see that the "strong three bid" is losing bridge.

The original suit bid of three is now reserved by fine players for those unusual hands so lacking in high card strength that they fear the opponents have a game. Their hand would be worthless at any declaration except that suit, but the suit itself is so long that they could not be punished too badly if doubled by opponents who held all the high cards. Their purpose in making such a bid is, of course, pre-emptive, to shut the strong opponents out of the bidding entirely, if possible, or at least to crowd them into the wrong declaration.

Take these three hands, for instance:

1. ♠ A K Q 10 9 4
♥ A 6
♦ J 4
♣ 8 6 4
2. ♠ A 10 9 7 6 5 4 2
♦ K 5
♣ 6 4
3. ♠ Q J 9 7 6 5 2
♦ None
♣ J 10 9 6

Hand No. 1 is much too strong to justify crowding your own side with a bid of 3-Spades; your partner's response may have to be first in diamonds and later in clubs. If so, how will you then get down into 3-No Trumps, which may be the only game in the deal? It is a fine opening bid of 1-Spade. No. 2 is still much too strong in high cards for 3-Spades; better to pass and get into the bidding later, than crowd your side or tell your partner your hand has no value if he considers a late business double of the opponents. No 3 is a perfect example of the unusual kind of hand on which the stars bid 3-Spades. If vulnerable, telling your partner, as well as opponents, your hand is worthless, that you are overbidding a couple of tricks, or possibly three, and that you are trying to impede the probably stronger opponents. If not vulnerable, it would justify 4-Spades, and with one less spade it would call for 3-Spades.

Such a hand, on weak enough hands, with a long enough suit, raise hob with strong opponents. In striving to compete against them, practically all fine players have changed their conventions, since now they will often desire to play a No Trump game contract after an opponent has made such a bid, whereas against the outmoded solid-suit three bid, No Trump game was generally impossible.

The conventions widely used now against a weak three-bid by the best players—about which we first wrote approximately two years ago—are as follows: 3-No Trumps shows a desire to play at that contract; a double indicates the hope of beating the contract of three; a minimum bid of the next higher ranking suit, such as 4-Hearts over 3-Diamonds or 4-Clubs over 3-Spades, shows strength in the other suits and operates like an informative or takeout double asking the partner to bid his suit length, and any other bid is in its natural meaning. Conventions following opening bids of four are unchanged.

Your Week-End Question
What are the two basic plans for the play of a suit contract, one or the other of which must usually be used to some extent, to the exclusion of the other, to obtain the best results?

vantage being, of course, the claims never talk back to their owners.

Gold continues to appreciate—according to a news item. And we continue to appreciate it, too—more and more.

That Connecticut man who kayaked a wasp with a slingshot should next try going after those pesky mosquitoes with a bean shooter.

Hoarding butter, says the man at the next desk, is a foolish stunt. In fact, he adds, it is a positively rancid idea.

Benjamin Franklin made no money from his inventions, as he believed they should be contributed to the public.

Victory for President
Over Loan Is Forecast

Senate Seen Sympathetic
Toward Vet Housing Bill

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—President Truman has been beaten on most of his legislative proposals since he has been in the White House. But he at last is in a position where a number of victories—at least partial ones—seem indicated between now and July 1.

The president is likely to be successful in persuading Congress to approve the $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain. A heavy tide of opposition at one time was running against this proposal. Now the tide is running the other way.

An incomplete victory is in sight on price control extension. A powerful drive is being conducted against the bill to continue the controls and a terrific fight is still ahead. But the chances are that the controls will be continued—in a modified form.

Another partial victory is in prospect on the Veterans' Housing bill. The administration took a severe beating on this bill in the House, which stripped from it the subsidy and ceiling provisions which the president called the "heart" of the legislation. But the Senate is more sympathetic to the administration viewpoint. When the final score is totaled it appears that Mr. Truman will come out a winner.

ELECTION OF REP. CARROLL REECE of Tennessee as Republican national chairman means that the GOP will make an all-out bid to split the Democratic majority in the so-called "solid south."

This is particularly true of the 1948 presidential campaign. Reece's announcement that he is "nobody's man" is the scramble for the GOP candidacy is regarded by political observers as a straw in the wind.

Actually, the 56-year-old Tennessean, be-medaled hero of the first World war and prosperous banker, will tread a middle-of-the-road policy between the Republican left and the Republican right.

He will lean in the direction of strongest party sentiment, somewhere between the political philosophies of former Governor Stassen of Minnesota and former Governor Bricker of Ohio, Governor Dewey's 1944 running mate.

Consensus is that Reece will reject the resignation tendered by former Sen. John Danaher of Connecticut, as Congressional aide to the party.

This year, the GOP figures on capturing the House and possibly the Senate control. In the 1948 presidential race they are optimistic on the border states, such as Kentucky, and hope to plunge farther south into territory which knocked tradition into a cocked hat and voted for Herbert Hoover in 1928.

GOP eyes are on North Carolina and Texas, with the big bloc of restless electoral votes.

WASHINGTON OBSERVERS do not expect financial arrangements to be made either with Russia or France until the United States has committed itself on a loan to China and other direct aid to rehabilitate that battered and near-chaotic country.

The state department has received top advice that any aid to the Soviet Union or France before China has been given attention would lower United States prestige in the Orient at a time when it is essential to maintain it.

The Chinese people feel that they have No. 1 priority on claims for United States aid. They contend they fought a ruinous war for eight years while France gave up after a comparatively short time.

As far as Russia is concerned, a loan there—and Russia has asked for a billion-dollar line of credits—would increase Russian prestige in strategic areas where Moscow feels it important to have control.

Those whose words are often heeded by the state department declare that American prestige in China is essential to peace in the Pacific—and to world peace.

DESIGNERS AND MANUFACTURERS OF WOMEN'S APPAREL VISIT SEATTLE

BY BARBARA BUNDSCHU United Press Staff Correspondent SEATTLE, April 20—There's a three-fold fashion significance in the post-war air age, and the thriving city of Seattle this week underscored its importance to itself and every other city of the nation with a flying party for 25 of the nation's top flight designers and manufacturers of women's apparel. The "fashion personalities" flew in from New York to lend their talents to a Red Cross benefit fashion show in exchange for an opportunity to catch illusive inspiration in the history and natural beauties of the young and booming northwest. And the tale their trip told is just as important to the woman who knows only the sound of a plane over the house as it is to her neighbor packing a wardrobe within flying weight limits. Seattle's largest department store, Frederick and Nelson, hosts to the flying designers, is 2,625 air miles from the New York clothing markets, but less than a day from the high style sewing machines of that garment center. And the manufacturers records show that Seattle women, exchanging their factory overalls for femininity again, are more aware than ever before of high style trends, and more anxious about them. The designers, for their part, have the world to roam without losing too much time from their cutting boards. Seattle showed them with pride its snow slopes and ocean beaches, the post-war increase in population which amazed even its boosters, its gateway to Alaska and the great circle route to the Orient, all a primary influence on the buying habits of their customers. To lend a touch of inspiration, the city turned the sunshine on its magnificent scenery, recalled its frontier days with an Indian pageant, emphasized its industrial giants—the airplane plant, the shipyard, the lumber mills and fisheries, and cut its camellias from bushes standing in gardens beside red berried holly. The famous guests spent a morning sightseeing, a day sailing on Puget Sound before a salmon barbecue on the shores of mountain ringed, city-locked Lake Washington. They appeared as honored guests at the fashion show which featured their own creations and took the minds of 1,500 Seattle citizens, at least temporarily of their new and itching vaccinations. And they contributed their own $5,000 to the Red Cross for which the show was staged. Consumption of nitrogen fertilizers jumped from a prewar average of about 300,000 tons annually in the U. S. to about 626,000 tons a year in 1942-45.

The Light of EASTER At Easter this year, we find ourselves grappling in the dark with innumerable problems, fearful of the future. Mind and body can take us only just so far. From that point on, we must call upon the power of the human spirit. Science has taught us how to use radar waves, which go out and come back, telling us of the shores that lie ahead. Can we not use religion in the same way? Let us send our prayers this Easter Sunday out and up to God. If we will do this, back will come new faith and strength and a clear, strong light that will lead our feet to the paths of peace and brotherhood. ## DESIGNERS AND MANUFACTURERS OF WOMEN'S APPAREL VISIT SEATTLE

BY BARBARA BUNDSCHE
United Press Staff Correspondent
SEATTLE, April 20—There's a three-fold fashion significance in the post-war air age, and the thriving city of Seattle this week underscored its importance to itself and every other city of the nation with a flying party for 25 of the nation's top flight designers and manufacturers of women's apparel.

The "fashion personalities" flew in from New York to lend their talents to a Red Cross benefit fashion show in exchange for an opportunity to catch elusive inspiration in the history and natural beauties of the young and booming northwest.

And the tale their trip told is just as important to the woman who knows only the sound of a plane over the house as it is to her neighbor packing a wardrobe within flying weight limits.

Seattle's largest department store, Frederick and Nelson, hosts to the flying designers, is 2,625 air miles from the New York clothing markets, but less than a day from the high style sewing machines of that garment center.

And the manufacturers records show that Seattle women, exchanging their factory overalls for femininity again, are more aware than ever before of high style trends, and more anxious about them.

The designers, for their part, have the world to roam without losing too much time from their cutting boards. Seattle showed them with pride its snow slopes and ocean beaches, the post-war increase in population which amazed even its boosters, its gateway to Alaska and the great circle route to the Orient, all a primary influence on the buying habits of their customers.

To lend a touch of inspiration, the city turned the sunshine on its magnificent scenery, recalled its frontier days with an Indian pageant, emphasized its industrial giants—the airplane plant, the shipyard, the lumber mills and fisheries, and cut its callias from bushes standing in gardens beside red berried holly.

The famous guests spent a morning sightseeing, a day sailing on Puget Sound before a salmon barbecue on the shores of mountain ringed, city-locked Lake Washington. They appeared as honored guests at the fashion show which featured their own creations and took the minds of 1,500 Seattle citizens, at least temporarily off their new and itching vaccinations. ted their own $5,000 to the Red Cross for which the show was staged.

Consumption of nitrogen fertilizers jumped from a prewar average of about 300,000 tons annually in the U. S. to about 625,000 tons a year in 1942-45.

ASHVILLE SET FOR FIRST GAME

Special Ceremonies To Mark Opening Game In SCO At Chillicothe

Special opening game ceremonies are planned Sunday afternoon at Meaco Park, Chillicothe, when the Mead Papermakers and Ashville open the South Central Ohio league baseball schedule.

Division Manager H. E. Teter of the Mead Corporation is scheduled to pitch the first ball and the game will be attended by officials of the new league. The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 p. m. The Ashville Reds, now in the process of organization, will be facing a veteran organization at Chillicothe. Mead has sponsored a team for many years and some of this year's players are veterans. A few newcomers have won places on the team managed by Barney Taggart, old time big leaguer.

Manager Bill Black is building an Ashville team, composed mostly of young ballplayers. The new circuit is a strictly amateur setup and several high school boys are expected to be on the roster. Some Pickaway county boys in college now expect to join the team later. A few men who have returned from service round out the roster of the Ashville club.

The probable starters Sunday for the Ashville club are Swayer, Trego, N. Black, Rook, Bernard, Wellington, Brown, Luckett, with pitchers being chosen from Gregg, Forquer and D. Black.

Three other games will be played Sunday: Washington C. H. at Jamestown; Milledgeville at Greenfield; Jeffersonville at Sabina.

MCCARTHY TO MILLERS; CARDS GET SURKONT BACK

BOSTON, April 20—First Baseman Johnny McCarthy of the Boston Braves was sold today to Minneapolis of the American Association, and rookie pitcher Max Surkont was returned to the St. Louis Cardinals because of a sore arm.

McCarthy, now 33, was sold to make way for Ray Sanders whom the Braves acquired Monday along with Surkont from the Cards. A native of Chicago, he broke in with the New York Giants in 1937 and later was traded to the Braves. Before entering the Navy in 1943, he batted .304 for the Boston club in 78 games.

When Surkont reported to the Braves with a sore arm, he was examined by the club physician who said he had an elbow irritation which might take several months to heal. Owner Sam Breadon of the Cards agreed to take him back and cancel that part of the recent deal.

BENNY CULP WILL FACE MANSLAUGHTER CHARGES

PHILADELPHIA, April 20—Benny Culp, Philadelphia Phillies coach who admitted to police that he became panicky and drove away after his automobile fatally injured a man, will be formally charged with manslaughter and leaving the scene of an accident, police said today.

Culp, held in $3,500 bail, will go before the court Tuesday. His victim, 70-year-old Lawrence Becker, died shortly after Culp's auto struck him yesterday as he crossed a street. Culp surrendered to police several hours later.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

This move to get Iran out of UN now was designed, I am informed, in preparation for the next Russian move which is Spain. Her plan was to get rid of her own embarrassment now in preparation for her attack through Poland and France, upon Spain. Otherwise we would have Iran hanging over her head, during consideration of Spain—and she is wholly without justification in Iran and subject to sound attack upon any phase of it. And incidentally, if she succeeded in making UN drop the matter, it would immaterial to all concerned whether she gets her troops out before May 6 as promised.

After Spain, in UN consideration, may come China, where Communist armies are fighting pitched battles with the government. Few authorities think real agreement possible there, because the Communists wish to run that government, the same as they wish to run Iran. Elimination of Iran by UN now would avoid comparisons embarrassing to Russia.

I would say events are exposing the futility of deception in Communist diplomacy to all the world. Things known formerly by the well informed, are now plain to all the world. Moscow has become more tricky, but less smart. She has become apparent.

McCARTHY TO MILLERS; CARDS GET SURKONT BACK

BOSTON, April 20—First Base man Johnny McCarthy of the Boston Braves was sold today to Minneapolis of the American Association, and rookie pitcher Max Surkont was returned to the St. Louis Cardinals because of a sore arm.

McCarthy, now 33, was sold to make way for Ray Sanders whom the Braves acquired Monday along with Surkont from the Cards. A native of Chicago, he broke in with the New York Giants in 1937 and later was traded to the Braves. Before entering the Navy in 1943, he batted .304 for the Boston club in 78 games.

When Surkont reported to the Braves with a sore arm, he was examined by the club physician who said he had an elbow irritation which might take several months to heal. Owner Sam Breadon of the Cards agreed to take him back and cancel that part of the recent deal.

Her plan was to get rid of her own embarrassment now in preparation for her attack through Poland and France, upon Spain. Otherwise we would have Iran hanging over her head, during consideration of Spain—and she is wholly without justification in Iran and subject to sound attack upon any phase of it. And incidentally, if she succeeded in making UN drop the matter, it would be immaterial to all concerned whether she gets her troops out before May 6 as promised.

After Spain, in UN consideration, may come

Easter Services Will Climax Holy Week Observance In Churches

CRISP AND COOL
WEATHER SEEN
EASTER SUNDAY

Church Programs Start At Dawn; Annual Parade
To Be Colorful

Easter Sunday thousands of adherents to the Christian faith in the Circleville area will celebrate the anniversary of the resurrection of their Saviour by attending special church services which will climax Holy Week observance.

In keeping with the joyous occasion there will be the annual Easter parade in Circleville. Feminine spring finery will be displayed. Masculinity will also don new attire. Small girls and boys will appear in their best bib-and-tucker.

Doubtless the Easter parade in 1946 will be not so lavish as in preceding years because of post-war scarcity of wearing apparel but those who like to participate in the annual parade have put forth their best efforts to meet the obstacles that confronted them in acquiring spring finery.

The weather forecast is for cool—perhaps even crispy—temperatures with the possibility of an occasional shower. However, the joyous Easter spirit of the celebrants is expected to remain undampened.

Many Circlevillians who have been away from home will pay the city a visit on Easter Sunday. Others whose homes are elsewhere but who have been living in Circleville will visit their old home places on the holiday.

Following an annual custom the churches have arranged special Easter services and the lure of their faith is expected to attract many to the houses of worship.

Services in many churches start with Easter sunrise programs. Sunday School will be held as usual with the climax of the worship program coming at the morning worship hour.

Attendance was very good at the union Good Friday service held at the First Methodist church. Ministers of various city churches participated in the program. "The Crucifixion", sponsored by the Pickaway County Ministerial association.

Several new members joined the First United Brethren church at Palm Sunday services.

The rite of baptism was administered to Cheryl Lee Hoover, Linda Lou Ankrom, Charles Craig Kirkpatrick, Sharon Ann Stebbins, Diana Kay Dick, Stephen Parker Elick, Shirley Jane Davis, Ronald Albright, Irene Louise Rife, Judy Ann Woodward, Helen Levern Rife, Eleanor Elaine Woodward, Carolyn Mae Huber, June Ellen Wilkinson, Wilma Jean Wilkinson, Dale Edwin Wilkinson, Joseph Frank Wilkinson, Virginia Lee Eppard, Emmet W. Eppard, Jr., Patricia Joy Anderson, John Norman Anderson, Rebecca Mae Strawser, Rose Mary Strawser, Carolyn Ann Smalley, Mrs. James Cook, Judith Elaine Reichelderfer, Timothy Arthur Reichelderfer, Wilma Jean Seyfang, Kathleen Arbutus Hare, Nancy Lee Goldsberry, David Timothy Thomas, Doris Irene Woodruff and James Stanley Arnold.

Confirmation rites were administered to the following children, who successfully completed a six weeks class in catechetical and church membership instructions. Ronald Hawkes, Delores Valentine, Tommy Valentine, Mae Elizabeth Martin, Lucille Kline, Edith Frances Kline, Annabelle Kline, Carolyn Huffer, Margaret Huffer, Martha Elizabeth Hettinger, Emmet William Eppard and Janet Marie Eppard.

The following youth and adults were consecrated for church membership: Marjorie Ankrom, Gladys Valentine, Lorin Valentine, Verneal Thomas, Eugene Richardson, Edwin Richardson, Mrs. Robert Arledge, Jimmie Arledge, Wilna Warner, Mrs. James Cook, Hazel Metz, Roy Huffer, Jr.; Marilyn Francis, Richard Francis, James Starkey, Ralph Starkey, Mrs. Chester Starkey, Patty Nau, Frank Moats, Charles Joseph Stout, Teddy Sims, James Arnold, Mrs. Carl Wilkins.

"AND HE SAITH UNTO THEM, BE NOT AFFRIGHTED; YE SEEK JESUS OF NAZARETH, WHICH WAS CRUCIFIED: HE IS RISEN; HE IS NOT HERE; BEHOLD THE PLACE WHERE THEY LAID HIM."—ST. MARK 16:6.

Two Friends Talk With Christ

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Easter Sunday, April 21, is Luke 24:13-35, the Memory Verse being Mark 16:6. "He is risen.")

TODAY'S LESSON is about the risen Lord, and no lesson this year has told us about the events leading up to the crucifixion.

This is the story of two friends of Jesus and their conversation with Him on their way from Jerusalem to the village of Emmaus, the site of which is not definitely known today, but is generally thought to be the present El Kubeibeh.

These two men, only one of whom is called by name in St. Luke's account, were not apostles, chosen by the Lord, but disciples and believers. One of the men was named Cleopas—a name not mentioned in any other story in the New Testament. The two were talking of the recent events, the death of Jesus, the one they had accepted as the Messiah, and also of the rumors of His resurrection, which, however, they were slow to believe.

"And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near, and went with them. But their eyes were hidden that they should not know Him."

Jesus asked what they were talking about as they walked, and why they were sad. Cleopas answered by asking Him a question: "Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast thou not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?"

Expected to Redeem Israel
Asked what these things were, they told Him of Jesus of Nazareth "which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people." Of how the priests and rulers had put Him to death. "But we trusted that it had been He which should have redeemed Israel: and besides all this, today is the third day since these things were done."

"Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre. And when they found not His body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that He was alive."

SPECIAL MUSIC MARKS PROGRAM OF METHODISTS

Easter will be celebrated at the First Methodist church with special music and sermon.

The Rev. Clarence Swearingen has chosen for his Easter sermon topic, "Christ the Resurrection of Life."

The senior choir with Miss Beatrice Sprague directing, will sing the anthem "Go To Dark Gethsemane" by Noble. Mrs. Harold Deffenbaugh will sing as a solo number "The Lord Is Risen" by Sullivan.

Hunter Chambers will use for his organ numbers "On the Mount" by Frysinger and "Postlude in G Minor" by Woodman.

Youth Fellowship will sponsor an Easter sunrise service at 5:30 a. m. Special music has been planned for this program.

Members received into the fellowship of the Presbyterian church at the Candlelight-Communion service Thursday were: Eric W. Peters, Mrs. Emmet D. Evans, Mrs. Phil H. Smith, and John O. Gussman.

"Then He said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken."

Then, beginning with Moses, and all the prophets, He expounded to them in the scriptures all the things concerning Himself.

When they neared the village Jesus would have left them, but they said, "Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent." So He went with them, and at supper that evening, as Jesus took bread, broke it, and blessed it and gave it to His companions, their eyes were opened and they recognized their Lord, "and He vanished out of their sight. And they said to one another, Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the scriptures?"

That same hour they rose up and returned to Jerusalem, and there they found the 11 apostles together, and some that were with them, and they said, "The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon."

"And they told what things were done in the way, and how He was known of them in breaking of bread."

These two friends of Jesus were not the only ones who did not recognize the Master when He appeared to them after His resurrection. Mary of Magdala did not, and others.

Everyone was talking about Jesus of Nazareth who had won so many followers, but had been put to death by the priests and rulers, so no wonder they thought this stranger to them must be someone from outside, not from Jerusalem, because He did not know—or appeared not to know—why they were sad, nor what they would most likely be discussing.

It seemed a little odd, too, that Jesus should appear to these two humble men who evidently were not close friends of His, and take such pains to instruct them in all the sayings and prophecies about Him. But Jesus always was concerned about the common man, and He had great faith in him, choosing His closest associates from the ranks of poorer and humbler men.

Rejoice and have faith this Easter Day, for Christ is risen!

EXCERPT FROM TEACHINGS OF THE BAHAI FAITH

"The religion of God is the One Religion, and all the prophets have taught it, but it is a living and a growing thing, not lifeless and unchanging. In the teaching of Moses we see the Bud, in that of Christ the Flower; in that of Baha'u'llah the Fruit. The flower does not destroy the bud, nor does the fruit destroy the flower.—It destroys not, but fulfills. The bud-scales must fall in order that the flower may bloom, and the petals must fall that the fruit may grow and ripen.

"Were the bud-scales and the petals wrong or useless, then, that they had to be discarded? Nay, both in their time were right and necessary; without them there could have been no fruit.

"So it is with the various prophetic teachings; their externals change from age to age, but each revelation is the fulfillment of its predecessors; they are not separate nor incongruous, but different stages in the life history of the One Religion, which has in turn been revealed as seed, as bud and as flower, and now enters on the stage of fruition."

Easter Services Will Climax Holy Week Observance In Churches

CRISP AND COOL WEATHER SEEN EASTER SUNDAY

Church Programs Start At Dawn; Annual Parade To Be Colorful

Easter Sunday thousands of adherents to the Christian faith in the Circleville area will celebrate the anniversary of the resurrection of their Saviour by attending special church services which will climax Holy Week observance.

In keeping with the joyous occasion there will be the annual Easter parade in Circleville. Feminine spring finery will be displayed. Masculinity will also don new attire. Small girls and boys will appear in their best bib-and-tucker.

Doubtless the Easter parade in 1946 will be not so lavish as in preceding years because of post-war scarcity of wearing apparel but those who like to participate in the annual parade have put forth their best efforts to meet the obstacles that confronted them in acquiring spring finery.

The weather forecast is for cool—perhaps even crisp—temperatures with the possibility of an occasional shower. However, the joyous Easter spirit of the celebrants is expected to remain undampened.

Many Circlevillians who have been away from home will pay the city a visit on Easter Sunday. Others whose homes are elsewhere but who have been living in Circleville will visit their old home places on the holiday.

Following an annual custom the churches have arranged special Easter services and the lure of their faith is expected to attract many to the houses of worship.

Services in many churches start with Easter sunrise programs. Sunday School will be held as usual with the climax of the worship program coming at the morning worship hour.

Attendance was very good at the union Good Friday service held at the First Methodist church. Ministers of various city churches participated in the program. "The Crucifixion", sponsored by the Pickaway County Ministerial association.

Two Friends Talk With Christ

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Easter Sunday, April 21, is Luke 24:13-35, The Memory Verse being Mark 16:6. "He is risen.")

TODAY'S LESSON is about the risen Lord, and no lesson this year has told us about the events leading up to the crucifixion.

This is the story of two friends of Jesus and their conversation with Him on their way from Jerusalem to the village of Emmaus, the site of which is not definitely known today, but is generally thought to be the present El Kubbeh.

These two men, only one of whom is called by name in St. Luke's account, were not apostles, chosen by the Lord, but disciples and believers. One of the men was named Cleopas—a name not mentioned in any other story in the New Testament. The two were talking of the recent events, the death of Jesus, the one they had accepted as the Messiah, and also of the rumors of His resurrection, which, however, they were slow to believe.

"And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near, and went with them. But their eyes were holden that they should not know Him."

Jesus asked what they were talking about as they walked, and why they were sad. Cleopas answered by asking him a question: "Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast thou not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?"

Expected to Redeem Israel
Asked what these things were, they told him of Jesus of Nazareth, "which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people." Of how the priests and rulers had put Him to death. "But we trusted that it had been He which should have redeemed Israel: and besides all this, today is the third day since these things were done."

"Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre. And when they found not His body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that He was alive."

SPECIAL MUSIC MARKS PROGRAM OF METHODISTS

Easter will be celebrated at the First Methodist church with special music and sermon.

The Rev. Clarence Swearingen has chosen for his Easter sermon topic, "Christ the Resurrection of Life."

The senior choir with Miss Beatrice Sprague directing, will sing the anthem "Go To Dark Gethsemane" by Noble, Mrs. Harold Deffenbaugh will sing as a solo number "The Lord Is Risen" by Sullivan.

Hunter Chambers will use for his organ numbers "On the Mount" by Frysinger and "Postlude in G Minor" by Woodman.

Youth Fellowship will sponsor an Easter sunrise service at 5:30 a. m. Special music has been planned for this program.

Members received into the fellowship of the Presbyterian church at the Candlelight-Communion service Thursday were: Eric W. Peters, Mrs. Emmet D. Evans, Mrs. Phil H. Smith, and John O. Gussman.

"Then He said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken."

Then, beginning with Moses, and all the prophets, He expounded to them in the scriptures all the things concerning Himself.

When they neared the village Jesus would have left them, but they said, "Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent." So He went with them, and at supper that evening, as Jesus took bread, broke it and blessed it and gave it to His companions, their eyes were opened and they recognized their Lord. "And He vanished out of their sight. And they said to one another, Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the scriptures?"

That same hour they rose up and returned to Jerusalem, and there they found the 11 apostles together, and some that were with them, and they said, "The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon."

"And they told what things were done in the way, and how He was known of them in breaking of bread."

These two friends of Jesus were not the only ones who did not recognize the Master when He appeared to them after His resurrection. Mary of Magdala did not, and others.

Everyone was talking about Jesus of Nazareth who had won so many followers, but had been put to death by the priests and rulers, so no wonder they thought this stranger to them must be someone from outside, not from Jerusalem, because He did not know—or appeared not to know—why they were sad, nor what they would most likely be discussing.

It seemed a little odd, too, that Jesus should appear to these two humble men who evidently were not close friends of His, and take such pains to instruct them in all the sayings and prophecies about Him. But Jesus always was concerned about the common man, and He had great faith in him, cheering His closest associates from the ranks of poorer and humbler men.

Rejoice and have faith this Easter Day, for Christ is risen!

He declared that while his address will be on the subject of prohibition it will be far different from ordinary "political oratory."

A lecturer since he was 16 years old, Larkin has appeared before church congregations, young people's organizations, Sunday schools, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and at banquets, picnics, and before soldiers in World War I.

With the Rev. Carl L. Wilson as celebrant, divine worship will be celebrated at 10:30 o'clock. Miss Lucille Kirkwood, presiding at the console, will render Handel's "Hallelujah" and "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" compositions as the prelude and offertory organ response. For the postlude, Miss Kirkwood has chosen Armstrong's "Alleluia! Alleluia!" The choir under the direction of Mr. Charles Kirkpatrick has selected the anthem, "He Arose" by Lowrey. The Junior Church will worship with the Senior Church.

The sermon theme, "The Message of the Open Tomb," finds its setting in St. Mark, chapter 16, verse 6; "Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: He is risen; He is not here."

At 7:30 o'clock, an Easter vesper service will be held at the church with the pastor delivering the sermon on the theme, "He Goeth Forth Before You," with a continuation of the morning text found in St. Mark 16:7.

'RESURRECTION' EASTER SUNDAY SERMON SUBJECT

The Children's Choir will sing the Welsh Hymn Melody, "O Joyous Easter Morning." The Women's Chorus will be heard in two selections: Mrs. Melvin Kiger will direct the anthems, "Jesus, Our Lord, We Adore Thee" by Will James, and "King of Kings" by Simper.

At the organ, Miss Abbe Mills Clarke will play "Christus Resurrectus" by Ravanella, Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," and "Triumphal March" by Guilmant.

During the worship service the Rev. Mr. Kennedy will perform the sacrament of baptism for several infant children.

EXCERPT FROM TEACHINGS OF THE BAHAI FAITH

"The religion of God is the One Religion, and all the prophets have taught it, but it is a living and a growing thing, not lifeless and unchanging. In the teaching of Moses we see the Bud, in that of Christ the Flower; in that of Baha'u'llah the Fruit. The flower does not destroy the bud, nor does the fruit destroy the flower. It destroys not, but fulfills. The bud-scales must fall in order that the flower may bloom, and the petals must fall that the fruit may grow and ripen."

"Were the bud-scales and the petals wrong or useless, then, that they had to be discarded? Nay, both in their time were right and necessary; without them there could have been no fruit."

"So it is with the various prophetic teachings; their external change from age to age, but each revelation is the fulfillment of its predecessors; they are not separate nor incongruous, but different stages in the life history of the One Religion, which has in turn been revealed as seed, as bud and as flower, and now enters on the stage of fruition."
